

Culture Mine™

Culture Mine is a trio of consulting partners committed to helping organizations develop a stronger identity and express it compellingly through knowing and telling their stories.

We believe that every organization has a unique culture composed of formal mission statements, anecdotal histories, leadership lore, daily customs, and shared language. Our mission is to help organizations realize this culture by gathering stories that support their strategic and communication needs such as recruiting, orientation, mission and values alignment and organizational change.

We offer creative services in qualitative research, concepting, experiential learning design, training and facilitation, and narrative communication. We have several programs that help companies support their organizational initiatives working in collaboration with HR, OD, Recruiting, Strategy, Corporate Communications and other leaders. We'd like to help you. Contact us to explore a collaboration.

Who We Are

Debbie Cullen has developed teams through both start-up and stability phases. Her accomplishments include building out a client services department for Avenue A | Razorfish, developing new hire orientation and on-going trainings, and instituting quantitative/qualitative performance evaluation programs. Debbie@CultureMine.com • 206.660.9494

Rachel Carey DeBusk has worked for fifteen years in creative development of products and experiences that educate and entertain. She has developed entertaining content and delivery for business presentations, trainings and retreats for such companies as Microsoft, Bartell Drug and Starbucks. Rachel@CultureMine.com • 206.799.3460

Stokley Towles has developed and taught presentation workshops for fifteen years. Over the past ten years, he has collaborated with institutions to create performances that reflect their stories and cultures. These projects have paired him with government agencies, community groups, and university faculty. Currently he is a visiting professor at Colorado College and Antioch University. Stokley@CultureMine.com • 206.409.3042

www.CultureMine.com